Biographical or Historical Note

The National Parent-Teacher Association (PTA) is a national organization whose purpose is to promote parent and teacher engagement in schools to encourage student success. Northwestern School retained an active PTA membership that sponsored various events throughout the school year. The school was built in 1935 to consolidate the Midway School and Birmingham School after Milton County, GA merged with Fulton County, combining the two school systems. The name of the school was chosen in deference to both schools. Northwestern served as an elementary school until its closing in 1992. In 1996, it reopened as Northwestern Middle School during a reorganization of several Fulton County schools.
