Biographical or Historical Note

Roy K. Wood (1917-1987) was a noted conservationist and activist. He worked for the Department of the Interior for over twenty years and served as Assistant Secretary of the Interior from 1976-1981. Wood was a founder of the Chattahoochee Nature Center as well as president of the Roswell Historical Society. He conducted research on the history of Roswell and took part in projects to preserve local history, including the restoration of the local Perry and Fowler houses. Wood and his wife both campaigned for Jimmy Carter during the 1976 presidential election.

Scope and Content

This collection holds Wood's notes, interviews, and manuscripts written in the construction of The Early Settlement of the Roswell Countryside. The collection contains publications and items from Wood's involvement in the Carter-Mondale Presidential campaign of 1976. The collection also contains a scrapbook chronicling the restoration of the Old Perry Place, a local home.

Organization Note

Items in scrapbooks are kept in their original binders. Items throughout the collection are arranged by subject matter.
